

June 4th marked a happy day at St Saviour's when Rosie Waters married Jack Isaac.

The sun shone, the church looked beautiful, and their pony Rollo behaved himself.

Rosie and her father travelled from Macclesfield in vintage car Doris the Morris. The bride then drove herself to church in her pony carriage from Edinboro Cottages where her godmother Louise lives.

30 guests were present to watch the marriage service, then Jack and Rosie made the short carriage journey to a wonderfully decorated and bunting-bedecked Schoolrooms, where Pimms and an afternoon tea awaited; even the bride's father's speech with ukulele solo failed to dampen the mood of happiness.

The couple had a honeymoon on Mull and have made their home in Macclesfield. Jack is a chimney sweep and stove installer who works for Eaves. He was brought up in Devon, but both he and Rosie would like to thank everyone from Wildboarclough. The village adopted them, made them welcome and came out to support them on their special day.
